The courts of South Africa are the civil and criminal courts responsible for the administration of justice in South Africa. They apply the law of South Africa and are established under the Constitution of South Africa or under Acts of the Parliament of South Africa.. Despite South Africa's division into nine provinces, the country has a single national court system.

by Dee McLachlan A "bomb" was dropped onto Australia on Thursday the 5th of July. Fiona Barnett accused Australia's Human Rights Commissioner of the most terrible crimes, dating back to the 1980s. They are crimes that would get a person life imprisonment. If, and I say if, these accusations (and other, related ones) are true, [...]

16 December 2018 – update Further to my post of 19th April 2018, the FCA have now notified the Court that they do not expect to be in a position to reach any conclusions concerning that investigation until 2020. That is a quite amazing statement, on the basis that they have been investigating this matter since April 2016.

Foreword. Taxation is a matter which can arouse strong passions, deep disagreements, and much confusion. That is, in part, due to two things. The first is that while many people do not like paying tax, few want to do away with the services tax pays for: supporting the retired, health, education, infrastructure (including public transport), the protection of the environment, public order and ...
